A NEW LATIN COMPOSITION

BY

CHARLES E. BENNETT

LATE GOLDWIN SMITH PROFESSOR OF LATIN IN CORNELL UNIVERSITY

PREFACE.

PART I of the present work is based exclusively on Caesar. The illustrative examples are drawn directly from Caesar's own writings, either unchanged or with unessential alterations designed to adapt the passage for practical use. The sentences of the Exercises bring into use only Caesar's vocabulary — chiefly the common words — and Caesar's constructions. The passages of continued discourse in Part I are devoted partly to a summary of the familiar episodes of the early books of the Gallic War, but deal mainly with the stirring events of the year 54 B.C. as narrated in Book V.

Part II is based on Cicero, and follows in detail the plan of Part I. The passages of continuous discourse interspersed among the Exercises deal with Cicero's life up to his consulship. The remainder give a somewhat detailed account of the career of Verres.

Part III is intended for the last year of the high school or academy, and consists of some thirty passages of continuous discourse, dealing with the subject-matter of the Fourteen Philippic Orations of Cicero.

In compliance with the request of a large number of teachers, I have included material for oral exercises in connection with Parts I and II of this book.

 11. vir summā auctōritāte, a man of the highest authority. (5)

Remarks.

1. The Ablative of Manner is best regarded as restricted to abstract words such as celeritās, dignitās, lēnitās, prūdentia, etc.

2. The Ablative of Quality primarily designates qualities which are more or less transitory. The observation sometimes made that the genitive denotes internal qualities, and the ablative external ones, is not sufficiently exact. In the phrase hortātur ut bonō animō sint, he urges them to be of good courage, the quality is internal: yet the genitive could not here be used; for while the quality is internal, it is transitory. The theoretical distinction between the Genitive of Quality and the Ablative of Quality is that the genitive denotes permanent, the ablative transitory, qualities. Yet where ambiguity would not result, the ablative may be used to denote a permanent quality. Thus one may say vir summae virtūtis or summā virtūte, a man of the highest character.

In all numerical designations of weight, dimension, etc., the genitive is used.

The Battle on the Sambre.

The attack was sudden and time was lacking for drawing up¹ a line of battle. Besides there were many hedges² which obstructed³ the view.⁴ Each legion, therefore, resisted those whom it met.⁵ The soldiers of the ninth and tenth legions fell upon⁶ the Atrebatas and drove them back, (all) out of breath⁷ with running,⁸ across the stream. At the same time the eleventh and eighth legions drove the Viromandui back from the camp, headlong⁹ towards the river. Accordingly there were left only two legions, the seventh and the twelfth, to defend the camp.¹⁰

Caesar saw the danger at once. The soldiers of the twelfth legion were huddled together⁴ so (closely) that they could not use their swords; nearly all the centurions were either killed or wounded. Thus the battle was renewed, and although the Nervii fought most courageously, yet the Romans finally defeated them and reduced their tribe almost to extinction.¹ Within a few days came envoys from the old men of the Nervii to beg that Caesar would exercise clemency towards them. They said that out of sixty thousand men scarcely five hundred were left, and out of six hundred senators only three. Caesar spared these suppliants² and permitted them to retain³ their towns and villages. On the following day he began to march against the Aduatuci, who were coming to the help of the Nervii.

Intrigues of Dumnorix.

When Caesar set out a second time¹ for Britain, he took with him all the chiefs whom he feared. Among these was Dumnorix, who, (just) as he was most popular² with³ the common people of the Gauls, so was a most bitter⁴ enemy of the Romans. A little while before, he had said to the Haedui that Caesar had decided to make him⁵ king. Though this was not true, it stirred up great indignation⁶ among the Haeduans; nor was it pleasing⁷ to Caesar, who was unwilling to leave Gaul, unless the Haeduans should be⁸ of a good disposition towards him.⁹

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. a second time: iterum.
2. popular: acceptus, a, um.
3. with: translate: to.
4. bitter: acerbus, a, um.
5. him: ipsum.
6. indignation: dolor, ōris, m.
7. pleasing: grātus, a, um.
8. should be: this is a Subordinate Clause of Indirect Discourse and must stand in the subjunctive.
9. him: use the reflexive.

* Twelve passages of continued discourse have been interspersed among the preceding lessons.

Dumnorix was unwilling to go with Caesar, because he saw that he would never again find so good an opportunity of conspiring against the Roman people. Accordingly he begged that he might be permitted¹ to remain at home; (saying) that he was inexperienced in sailing and feared the sea; that besides there were religious observances² which he could not perform, unless he should remain in Gaul. When this had been refused by Caesar, Dumnorix then tried to persuade the other chiefs to remain at home against Caesar's wishes.³

Suggestions on the Exercise

1. that he might be permitted: translate: that it might be permitted to him.
2. religious observances: use the plural of religiō, ōnis, f.
3. against Caesar's wishes: translate: Caesar being unwilling.

15.

In order to accomplish this purpose,¹ Dumnorix said that Caesar was taking² them all to Britain that he might put them to death, and that no one of those who went³ would ever return to Gaul. All these things were reported to Caesar through spies.⁴ Meanwhile the ships were detained by adverse⁵ winds⁶ in the Portus Itius.⁷ When finally a favorable⁸ wind sprang up⁹ and Caesar was setting sail,¹⁰ Dumnorix along with the cavalry of the Haeduans began to return home.

Death of Dumnorix.

As Dumnorix and his horsemen began to flee, Caesar immediately stopped¹ the departure and sent cavalry to overtake him and kill (him) if he should attempt to resist. When Caesar's cavalry demanded that Dumnorix should surrender, he began to defend himself by violence² and to implore³ the assistance of his (followers). When these hesitated⁴ to bear him aid, he was cut down⁵ by the Romans, shouting⁶ that he was free and a citizen of a free state. The Haeduans then returned with the Roman cavalry to the Port.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. stop : intermittō, ere, mīsī, missus.
2. violence : vīs (vis), f.

17.

Conditions in Gaul in the Winter of 54 B.C.

In that year in which Caesar had crossed the second time into Britain, the harvest had been poor.¹ In order therefore to secure enough grain, it was necessary to distribute the legions that winter in many places. Fearing an uprising, he decided to pass the winter among the Belgae, and stationed one legion among the Morini, who had recently² surrendered to Labienus. Another, in charge of which he had placed Quintus Cicero, brother of Marcus, he stationed among the Nervii; three others he sent among the Bellovaci; one was led to Aduatuca, which³ is a town of the Eburones.⁴

1. See Lesson XV, Example 7.
2. recently: translate: a little before
3. See Lesson III, Example 7.
4. Eburones: Eburōnēs, um, m.

18.

Assassination of Tasgetius.

In those states in which the nobles had driven out the kings, Caesar was wont¹ to reward with regal power the chiefs who had lent help to him. One of these, Tasgetius,² he made king of the Carnutes,³ a tribe which⁴ dwelt between the Seine⁵ and the Loire.⁵ How he used his power, we do not know; but soon after⁶ Caesar returned from Britain, Tasgetius was assassinated. As soon as Caesar heard of this, he sent Plancus with one legion to arrest all who had been participants⁷ in⁸ the deed and to prevent the rest from revolting.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. be wont: soleō, ēre, solitus, semi-dep.
2. Tasgetius: Tasgetius, ī, m.
3. Carnutes: Carnutēs, um, m.
4. a tribe which dwelt: translate: which tribe dwelt.

7. participants: participēs, um, m.
8. in: translate: of.

19.

Indutiomarus.

The murder of Tasgetius showed of what disposition the Carnutes were towards the Romans. There was also a chief of the Treveri, Indutiomarus by name, who already for a long time had been hostile to Caesar. Annually he called together all the Gallic chieftains in order that he might test¹ their temper.² Caesar, fearing that the state of the Treveri might revolt, having gathered a large force, marched into their territory before he set out for Britain, in order that he might restore the prestige of the Roman people.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. test: temptō, l.
2. temper: animus, ī, m.

20.

Indutiomarus (continued).

When Caesar came among¹ the Treveri, he found two chieftains, Indutiomarus and Cingetorix,² who were contending with each other for the supremacy.³ The latter at once came to Caesar and informed him what was being done by Indutiomarus. He⁴ meanwhile had gathered troops and was preparing to fight. Many (of the) senators, however, induced⁵ by the authority of Cingetorix, because they knew how powerful the Roman legions were,⁶ came to Caesar's camp and put themselves under his protection.⁷ Then Indutiomarus, since he saw that no one lent him help, attempted to excuse himself.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. among: use in with the acc.
2. Cingetorix: Cingetorix, īgis, m.
3. supremacy: principātus, ūs, m.
4. he: ille.

7. put oneself under the protection: sē dēdere in fidem (alicūjus).

21.

Indutiomarus (continued).

Caesar, since he thought he ought to set out¹ at once, demanded nothing except hostages from Indutiomarus. At the same time he did all things which he could for increasing the prestige² of Cingetorix. The next winter, after Caesar had returned from Britain, Indutiomarus, who resented (the fact) that³ his power among his (countrymen) had been impaired, began to seek an opportunity of avenging the injury. This was easier because the Roman camps which had been established among the Belgians were far distant from each other, so that one⁴ could not lend help to another.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. that he ought to set out: translate: that it ought to be set out by him (impersonal construction).
2. for increasing the prestige: use the gerundive construction with ad.
3. resent (the fact) that: molestē ferō (ferre, tulī, lātus), lit., bear hard: followed by the inf. with subj. acc.
4. one . . . to another: see Lesson XVII, Example 9.

22.

The Attack on Aduatua.

Ten days after¹ the legions had fortified their camp at Aduatua among the Eburones, Indutiomarus persuaded Ambiorix² and Catuvolcus,² each of whom held one half³ of the lands of the Eburones, to attack the Roman camp. Caesar was more than two hundred miles away. In the camp, in charge of which were Sabinus and Cotta, there were scarcely six thousand soldiers, of whom the larger part had just⁴ been enrolled. The Gauls thought therefore that an excellent opportunity⁵ of securing possession of the camp⁶ had been offered them.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. ten days after: translate: after by ten days than (quam).
2. Ambiorix: Ambiorix, īgis, m.; Catuvolcus: Catuvolcus, ī, m.

The Attack on Aduatuca (continued).

A few days afterwards Ambiorix and Catuvolcus, having gathered a large band of their (tribesmen), suddenly attacked the camp of the Romans. But the camp was strongly¹ fortified and had been placed on high ground.² Our men quickly took arms and mounted³ the rampart.⁴ Meanwhile (some) Spanish horsemen, having made a sally,⁵ drove back the Gauls with great slaughter. Then their leaders begged that some one would come out from the camp to confer with them. Two Roman knights were accordingly sent to them.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. strongly : ēgregiē, lit. excellently.
2. on high ground : superiōre locō.
3. mount : ascendō, ere, endī, ēnsus.
4. rampart : vāllum, ī, n.

24.

Ambiorix's Speech to the Romans.

Three years before, Caesar had relieved Ambiorix from the tribute which he had been forced to pay to the Aduatuci, and had also restored to him his son and his brother's son, whom the Aduatuci held as hostages. In the beginning of his speech Ambiorix mentioned these favors and declared that he desired to make a return¹ for² them. He said that he had not³ attacked the camp of his own accord, but forced by his tribesmen. These he said would not have brought war on the Romans, unless they had been compelled by the common conspiracy of all the Gauls.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. make a return : grātiā referō (ferre, rettulī, relātus).
2. for : prō, prep. with abl.
3. said that . . . not : for 'say that not,' the Latin regularly uses negō, āre, āvī, ātus.

25.

Ambiorix added¹: That his very weakness² proved³ that he was speaking the truth,⁴ for he was not so foolish⁵ as to think that his forces could resist the Romans; that the states of Gaul had leagued themselves together⁶ for the recovery of their freedom;⁷ that on that very day all the Roman camps would be attacked at one and the same time; let Sabinus therefore be on his guard;⁸ a very large multitude of Germans also had crossed the Rhine and would attack him within a few days.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. add : addō, ere, addidī, ditus.
2. weakness : humilitās, ātis, f.
3. prove : probō, 1.

5. foolish : stultus, a, um.
6. league themselves together : translate : conspire among themselves.
7. for the recovery of the freedom : translate : for freedom to be recovered (Gerundive Construction). For recover use recuperō, 1.
8. let him be on his guard : an Imperative Clause in Indirect Discourse; hence the subjunctive is to be used.

26.

If the two generals would follow his advice, they would abandon their camp at once and hasten to the winter quarters of Cicero or Labienus. He promised that no one would attempt to attack them on the march.

After he had delivered this speech,¹ Ambiorix withdrew, and the two knights returned to the camp and reported to Sabinus and Cotta what they had heard. These thought that the words of Ambiorix ought not to be despised; and that one tribe would not have dared to make war on the Roman people,² unless it were relying upon the help of the others.³

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. after he had delivered this speech: translate: this speech having been delivered.
2. on the Roman people: use the dat.
3. the others: i.e. the other tribes.

27.

A Council of War is Held.

Accordingly the tribunes and centurions of the first rank¹ were summoned to a council (of war), which was held² in the middle of the camp. Cotta spoke first, (saying) that without the order³ of Caesar they ought not to leave the camp; that (protected) by their fortifications they could resist all enemies who could be led against them; that they had already repulsed those who had attacked the camp; that a large supply⁴ of grain was on hand and that more was expected daily;⁵ finally that nothing was more foolish than to follow the advice of an enemy.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. of the first rank: prīmī pilī (gen.).
2. hold: habēō, ēre, uī, itus.
3. without the order: injussū.
4. supply: cōpia, ae, f.
5. daily: cottidiē.

The Council of War (continued).

Most (of the) tribunes and centurions were of the same opinion, but Sabinus said that the Eburones would not have attacked them unless they knew that Caesar had already gone back to Italy; that from him therefore no help could be expected; that the Germans, who dwelt near by,¹ and the Gauls desired to avenge the wrongs they had suffered; that he himself urged that they withdraw; that if Ambiorix had told the truth,² this was their one hope of safety; if he had spoken falsely,³ they incurred⁴ no risk.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. near by: prope.
2. tell the truth, speak falsely: vēra dīcere, falsa dīcere (say true things, say false things).
3. incur: subeō, īre īī, itus.

29.

The Romans Decide to March Out.

Although Sabinus could not persuade the tribunes and centurions that this was best¹ to do,² yet the rest yielded to him, and the command was given³ to march out from the camp at dawn.⁴ Meanwhile Ambiorix and the Eburones, hearing the voices⁵ from the camp, perceived that the Romans had decided to follow their advice, and prepared to attack them from an ambush, as they marched⁶ (along). That night they hid⁷ themselves in the woods⁸ through which the road led,⁹ and there awaited the approach of the Romans.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. that this was best: express by the inf.
2. to do: Lesson XXX, Example 10.
3. the command was given: translate: it was commanded.

9. lead: ferō, ferre, tulī, lātus.

30.

The Romans are Overwhelmed.

Sabinus had decided to go to the camp of Cicero. When they had marched about two miles, the Romans come to a defile.¹ The last cohort had entered this, when suddenly Ambiorix and the Eburones rushed forth² from the woods and attacked the Roman army. So sudden was the onset and so crowded were the cohorts that they could not withstand the multitude of Gauls who pressed upon³ them. Most (of them) were killed; a very few escaped through the woods to the camp of Labienus.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. defile: angustiae, ārum, f.
2. rush forth: sē ēicere (ēiciō, ere, ējēcī, ējectus).
3. press upon: urgeō. ere, ursī; trans.

31.

The Attack on Quintus Cicero.

After this victory Ambiorix did not delay, but set out immediately with his horsemen for¹ the camp of Quintus Cicero, which was about forty-five miles away; the infantry he ordered to follow him. On the following day he came into the territory of the Nervii, who had not forgotten the battle in which, three years before, Caesar had reduced their tribe nearly to extinction.² Ambiorix told their chiefs that Cicero's camp was near by;³ why should they not do⁴ as he had done,⁵ attack⁴ the legion, and recover⁴ their freedom?

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. for : ad.
2. extinction : interneciō, ōnis, f.
3. near by : use the adjective, fīnitimus, a, um.

The Attack on Quintus Cicero (continued).

Kindled¹ by these words of Ambiorix, the Nervii and other neighboring tribes joined² themselves with the Eburones, and the whole multitude set out for the Roman camp. Our men, as soon as they saw the Gauls approaching, quickly rushed³ to arms and mounted the rampart⁴ to ward off the enemy. Cicero immediately sent messengers to inform Caesar of the danger, and promised them large rewards, if they should deliver⁵ the letters. Meanwhile to the Gauls, asking a conference, Cicero replied that the Romans never accepted terms from an enemy in arms.⁶

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. kindled: incitātus, a, um.
2. join: conjungō, ere, jūnxī, jūctus.
3. rush: concurrō, ere, currī, cursum.

6. in arms: use the adj., armātus, a, um.

33.

The Message in the Spear-Shaft.

When the messengers whom Cicero had sent to Caesar had been captured in sight of the Romans, Cicero by promises of the largest rewards persuaded a Gaul whom he had in the camp, to try to make his way¹ to Caesar. The letter which Cicero gave him was concealed² in a spear. Carrying this the Gaul easily made his way¹ to Caesar, and informed him of the dangers of Cicero and the legion. On the following day Caesar set out with one legion and about four hundred³ cavalry, and hastened to come to Cicero's aid.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. make one's way: perveniō, ire, vēnī, ventum.
2. conceal: cēlō, 1.
3. four hundred: quadringentī, ae, a.

34.

The Gauls Raise the Siege.

As soon as the Gauls heard that Caesar was approaching, they set out to intercept¹ his army and cut it to pieces. That night Caesar was informed of their departure through a letter of Cicero, and encouraged his men for the conflict.² On the following day, having advanced about four miles, he came to a small stream, on the opposite side of³ which the enemy were waiting. Soon their horsemen crossed the stream and offered battle to our men, who by Caesar's order at once retreated.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. intercept: intercipiō, ere, cēpī, ceptus.
2. for the conflict: ad dīmīcandum.
3. on the opposite side of: ultrā, prep. with acc.

35.

The Gauls are Defeated.

Caesar had pitched his camp on the top of a hill, and had ordered his men to remain within the fortifications in order to give¹ the appearance of panic. Thus it happened that the Gauls boldly advanced up hill² against the camp, thinking that they would easily defeat the Romans. They had arrived at the ditch and were filling it up, when suddenly from all sides the Romans fell upon³ them and put them to rout. About the ninth⁴ hour on that same day Caesar's legions arrived at Cicero's camp.

Remarks.

1. Poscō, postulō, flāgitō, while admitting the construction of two accusatives, more commonly take the accusative of the thing asked and the ablative with ab of the person. Petō regularly takes only the latter construction, as tribūnātum ā Caesare petīvi, I asked a tribuneship from Caesar.

2. Rogō, inquire, besides neuter pronouns and adjectives, admits only sententiam as accusative of the thing.

3. Doceō may take an infinitive in place of the accusative of the thing, as tē doceō sentire, I teach you to perceive. The compound ēdoceō is the only verb of teaching that is freely used in the passive.

4. A favorite way of saying so many years old was by means of the phrase annōs nātus, as sexāgintā annōs nātus, sixty years old, lit. born sixty years.

11. multum tuīs operibus diūturnitās dētrahet, time will take away much from your achievements. (6)

Remarks.

1. Persuādeō and noceō, besides the dative of the person, may take the Accusative of Result Produced. This construction, however, is confined to narrow limits; the chief accusatives so used are hōc, illud, id, quod, quid (interrogative and indefinite), aliquid, nihil. Examples are:

hōc Anaximandrō nōn persuāsit, he did not persuade Anaximander to this effect.

quid mihi istius inimicitiae nocēbunt, what harm will that fellow's hostility do me?

2. In the passive construction of these verbs the accusative of the thing is retained, e.g.:

hōc ipsīs Siculīs persuāsum est, the Sicilians themselves were persuaded to this effect.

3. With mittō and scribō one may use either the accusative with ad or the dative, according as the idea of motion is or is not predominant. Thus either mihi or ad mē scripsistī, you wrote to me.

2. With nōmen est the name is very rarely attracted into the Dative in Cicero's writings, though quite commonly so attracted in later authors. Either construction, therefore, is quite idiomatic.

3. The chief verbs that take a Dative of Purpose besides sum are: relinquō, dēligō, dīcō, mittō, veniō, habeō, dūcō.

4. Among the commonest Datives of Purpose used with esse are: auxiliō, cūrae, dētrīmentō, salūtī, impedīmentō, odio, praesidiō.

The Volscians were a brave race and had waged many long wars with the Romans, but were finally subdued. Another famous man of the Volscians⁶ was Gaius Marius,⁷ who defeated and captured Jugurtha⁸ and later drove back the Cimbrians and Teutons. He⁹ also was born at Arpinum.

Remarks.

1. Causā is much commoner than grātiā in the sense, on account of, for the sake of.

2. The Objective Genitive occurs most frequently in combination with nouns derived from verbs that govern the accusative; yet by an extension of usage we sometimes find the genitive used with nouns derived from verbs that govern other cases, e.g. cōnsuētūdō hominū, intercourse with men (cf. cōnsuēscere cum hominibus, to associate with men); excessus vitae, departure from life (cf. excēdere ē vitā, to depart from life).

3. Observe that the Genitive of Quality, when applied to persons, is properly used only of permanent characteristics; incidental or transitory qualities cannot be indicated except by the ablative. See Lesson XII, Remark 3.

4. Note that the adjectives most frequently employed in connection with a genitive to denote quality are adjectives of amount (e.g. magnus, maximus, summus, tantus, and numerals); ejus, hūjus, etc., in combination with modi, also occur frequently.

Remark.

1. Cicero in his Orations (and probably also in his other works) confines the use of the Ablative of Comparison mainly to negative sentences and interrogative sentences implying a negative. No other writer, however, observes so strict a canon, and even in Cicero there is quite a percentage of exceptions. The ablative must be used in case of relative pronouns, i.e. always quō, quibus, — not quam quī. On the other hand, when the comparative is an attributive modifier of a noun in an oblique case, quam is used, and the proper form of the verb esse is expressed, as verba Varrōnis, hominis doctiōris quam fuit Claudius, the words of Varro, a more learned man than Claudius.

Cicero Serves in the Social War.

At the age of sixteen, Cicero came to Rome and spent several months in the city. He wished especially to hear the great orators of that time, but the Social War¹ had broken out, and the most famous of these orators, Hortensius, Rufus, and Antonius,² had taken arms and were with the army. Yet there were certain minor magistrates to whose harangues he listened daily. Before the end of the war, Cicero himself also served,³ first under Pompeius Strabo,⁴ later under Lucius Sulla.⁴

 15. multō plūris frūctūs Siciliae vēnīre potuērunt, the harvests of Sicily might have been sold at a much higher price. (6)

Remarks.

1. The Ablative of Manner is best restricted to abstract words, such as celeritās, dignitās, virtūs, prūdētia, etc.

2. The Ablative of Accordance (see Example 3) appears also in such expressions as meā sententiā, suis mōribus, suā sponte, etc.

3. The Ablative of Quality primarily designates qualities which are more or less transitory. The observation sometimes made that the genitive denotes internal qualities, and the ablative external ones, is not sufficiently exact. In the phrase hortātur ut bonō animō sint, he urges them to be of good courage, the quality is internal: yet the genitive could not here be used; for while the quality is internal, it is transitory. The theoretical distinction between the Genitive of Quality and the Ablative of Quality is that the genitive denotes permanent, the ablative transitory, qualities. Yet where ambiguity would not result, the ablative may be used to denote a permanent quality. Thus one may say vir summae virtūtis or summā virtūte, a man of the highest character.

In all numerical designations of weight, dimension, etc., the genitive is used.

Cicero's Oratorical and Philosophical Studies.

After the social war was finished,¹ Cicero returned to Rome and there devoted himself to the study of oratory² under the Rhodian³ rhetorician,⁴ Molo,⁵ who was then staying⁶ in the City. Philosophy⁷ he pursued⁸ under Philo,⁹ who had fled to Rome from the dangers of the Mithridatic War, and later under Diodotus.⁹ The latter lived for many years at Cicero's house¹⁰ and died there at last in the consulship of Caesar and Bibulus, leaving Cicero as his only heir.

Remarks

1. Observe that words not primarily denoting a period of time, as pāx, peace, bellum, war, commonly require the preposition in to denote time at which, unless they are accompanied by a modifier (adjective, demonstrative, or genitive). Thus, in bellō, in war, but primō bellō Pūnicō, in the First Punic War.

2. In bellō, in war, is to be distinguished in meaning and use from bellī. The former phrase is essentially temporal in meaning, — in time of war, while bellī is rather local, and means in the field; it occurs almost exclusively in combination with domī, at home, as domī bellique, at home and in the field.

3. To denote time within which, in the course of which, the preposition in is almost invariably employed when the clause contains a distributive numeral (bis, bīnī; ter, ternī) or saepe.

4. Bīduō, trīduō, quadriduō, and bienniō, trienniō, quadrienniō, are regularly used instead of duōbus diēbus, duōbus annīs, etc. Compare Lesson VII, Remark 4.

16. haec fuērunt maxima in illō, in hōc nūlla, these (defects) were very great in the former, non-existent in the latter. (9)

Notes on the Examples.

1. In other cases than the nominative and accusative this idea is best expressed by means of rēs, e.g. omnium rērum, of all things; omnibus rēbus, by all things. Omnium, omnibus, parvōrum, parvīs, and similar forms would be ambiguous in gender.
2. Lit. nothing of new, — Genitive of the Whole.
3. Suae illustrates the use of the indirect reflexive.
4. Ista is here attracted from istud to the gender of the predicate noun; such attraction of the pronoun is the rule in Latin.

Remarks.

1. Suī is regularly employed like meī and tui as an Objective Genitive. To indicate the whole of which a part is taken, the Latin may use either ex sē, ex suīs, or suōrum, e.g. multōs ex sē or multōs suōrum mīsērunt, they sent many of their own number.
2. Observe that in such expressions as inter sē amant, they love each other, no direct object is expressed.

Cicero's Legal Studies.

Cicero learned civil law from Quintus Mucius Scaevola,¹ the augur,² the most distinguished lawyer³ of that time. Cicero himself uses the following⁴ words concerning him: "As soon as I put on⁵ the dress of manhood,⁶ my father conducted me to Scaevola, and forbade me ever to withdraw from his side. Accordingly I committed⁷ to memory his discourses⁸ and wise⁹ sayings¹⁰ and enjoyed his wisdom." After his death, Cicero attended (on) another Scaevola, the pontifex maximus,¹¹ whom he calls the most eminent in talent of the Roman state.

Thus nōn eget cōnsiliō alicūjus means: he does not need the advice of some one, i.e. some individual. This sentence is the negation of eget cōnsiliō alicūjus, he needs the advice of some individual. Nōn eget cōnsiliō cūjusquam, on the other hand, constitutes a more general denial, — he does not need the advice of anybody (at all).

The Defence of Roscius (continued).

Those who had killed Roscius approached Chrysogonus,¹ a freedman² of Sulla, who added the name of Roscius to the number of the proscribed.³ Roscius' property⁴ was then confiscated⁵ and sold at a pretended⁶ auction.⁷ Chrysogonus bought it for a trifle,⁸ and then drove out from his father's house the young Roscius,⁹ who had meanwhile remained on his farm¹⁰ near Ameria.¹¹ Chrysogonus and his accomplices now divided the property between them.¹² But they still feared Roscius, and so accused him of the murder of his own father.

4. Substantive Clauses developed from the Optative. 296 entire; cf. A. & G. 563. b, 564; H. 565.
5. Substantive Clauses of Result. 297. 1-3; A. & G. 569. 1, 2, 570, 571; H. 571. 1-4.

EXAMPLES.

1. vōs ōrō nē id faciātis, I beg you not to do that. (1)
2. populus Rōmānus permittit ut civitate dōnentur, the Roman people allows them to be presented with citizenship. (1)

11. formidō impedit quō minus causam dicere velint, fear prevents them from being willing to plead the case. (3)

17. verentur ut habeam satis praesidī, they fear that I have not enough protection. (4)
18. persaepe accidit ut mirēmur, it happens very often that we marvel. (5)

Notes on the Examples.

1. Note the absence of ut, as regularly after vīsne, velim, vellem.
2. Velim is potential subjunctive; the present implies that the wish contained in the object clause is one capable of realization.
3. Vellem is likewise a potential subjunctive; the imperfect implies regret at the unreality of the object clause.

Remarks.

1. Licet and oportet take either the infinitive, or the subjunctive without ut, but the infinitive is the commoner construction, especially with licet; neesse est admits either construction.
2. Cōstituō, when denoting another act of the same subject, more commonly takes an infinitive than an ut-clause.
3. Prohibeō is much more commonly construed with an infinitive than with a Substantive Clause introduced by nē, quō minus, or quīn, e.g. sī quis tē introīre prohibuerit, if any one should prevent your entering. In Cicero and Caesar prohibeō never occurs followed by a quīn-clause, though it may take quō minus.
4. Impediō quīn does not occur in Cicero's speeches or philosophical works, though impediō quō minus is frequent.
5. In general, after negative expressions of hindering, quō minus is often used in preference to quīn.

2. Nōnne in indirect questions is used only after quaerō; see the 8th example above.

He spoke thus: "Chrysogonus, O judges, has gained possession of the fortune of another man,¹ and since that man lives, he asks you to condemn him and so deliver him himself from fear, for while Roscius is alive,² he fears that he himself will not retain this excellent inheritance³."

Cicero did not blame Sulla himself, but excused² (him) on the ground that³ he was ignorant of the deeds of his freedman. Reasons for Cicero's Temporary Retirement.

In another work Cicero tells us he withdrew from Rome. At that time he says that his body was weak and that his friends feared that he was not able to endure the labors of the forum. Both friends and physicians¹ therefore advised him to abandon² his profession. But Cicero says that he preferred to undergo all risks rather than to abandon the profession which he had chosen. He thought that if he should change his style,³ and should cultivate a less impassioned⁴ oratory,⁵ he would avoid all risks. Hence he decided to go away from Rome.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. physician: medicus, ī, m.
2. abandon: dēpōnō, ere, posuī, positus.
3. style: genus dīcendī, lit. kind of speaking (genus, eris, n.).
4. less impassioned: remissior, us, lit. more relaxed.
5. oratory: ōrātiō, ōnis, f.

1. Observe that the participle in the compound tenses of the infinitive agrees with the subject of the main verb in constructions of this type. The auxiliary esse is also freely omitted.

Remarks.

1. Note that where the English says 'ought to have done,' 'might have done,' the Latin uses dēbuī, oportuit, potuī, with the present infinitive, as, dēbuit venīre, he ought to have come; potuit venīre, he might (could) have come.

2. Note that verbs which have no participial stem express the future infinitive active and passive by fore ut or futūrum esse ut, with the subjunctive, as spērō fore ut hostēs arceantur, I hope the enemy will be kept off, lit. I hope it will happen that the enemy will be kept off.

PARTICIPLES.

GRAMMATICAL REFERENCES.

1. Tenses of the Participle. 336. 1-5; A. & G. 489 and 491; H. 640 and 1.
2. Use of Participles. 337. 1-3, 5, 8, a, b. 1), 2); A. & G. 494; 496, 497 and d; 500 and 1, 2, 4; H. 638, 1-3, 639, 613. 5.

3. audiam tē loquentem, I shall hear you as you speak, i.e. as you shall be speaking. (1)

11. eum jugulandum vōbīs tradidērunt, they handed him over to you to be put to death. (2)

Remarks.

1. Note that the perfect passive participle is often equivalent to a coördinate clause in English, as, C. Servilius Ahāla Sp. Maelium occupātum interēmit, Gaius Servilius Ahala surprised and slew Spurius Maelius, lit. slew him having been surprised.

2. Observe that the present active participle is used much less freely in Latin than in English. We employ it somewhat loosely 'o denote an act prior to that of the verb with which it is connected; as, 'Finding no means of escape, he surrendered.' Here the finding is anterior to the surrender. In such cases the Latin would employ some other form of expression; in that language the present participle is strictly limited to the expression of acts contemporary with the action of the main verb.

Cicero's Studies at Athens and in Asia.

When Cicero had come to Athens, he was six months with Antiochus,¹ a very eminent philosopher, and renewed the pursuit of philosophy² which had been cultivated by him from his earliest youth. At the same time he heard Demetrius,³ a famous master⁴ of oratory.⁵ In several towns of Asia he also enjoyed the learning⁶ and discipline of the most distinguished teachers. Notes on the Examples.

1. Note that fruo, like the other deponents governing the ablative, admits the gerundive construction.

2. Cōservandī agrees merely in form with suī and vestrī; in sense it is plural.

Remark.

1. The dative of the gerund and of the gerundive are both rare in Ciceronian Latin; consequently the construction, though common later, is hardly to be imitated by the beginner in Latin writing.

Cicero Elected Quaestor.

One year after Cicero returned¹ to Italy, he was elected quaestor, an office which he held² in the consulship of Cotta and Octavius. In accordance with³ a law of the Dictator Sulla, each⁴ quaestor after he left office⁵ became senator for life.⁶ But before he began to perform the duties of a senator, Cicero by lot secured⁷ Sicily (as) his province and betook himself to Lilybaeum.⁸ At that time there were two quaestors in Sicily, one of whom resided⁹ at Lilybaeum, the other at Syracuse.

14.

Conditions at Rome at this Time.

At the age of thirty-two years Cicero returned again to Rome from Sicily. At that time the optimates or nobles were in control¹ in the republic. These nobles had inherited the splendid² traditions³ of their ancestors, who had made Rome great and powerful at the time of the Punic and Macedonian wars.⁴ All were nobles who could reckon curule⁵ magistrates among their ancestors, and he was noblest in whose hall⁶ was the greatest number of family portraits⁷ of consuls, censors, and dictators

Suggestions on the Exercise.

2. splendid: ēgregius, a, um.
3. traditions: mōrēs, um, m., lit. customs.

7. family portrait: imāgō, inis, f.

15.

Conditions at Rome at this Time (continued).

At this time also the nobles had already for many years won¹ all the offices.² No one unless born of noble family could be elected a magistrate. This had not been laid down³ by law, but was the custom. It was entirely according to⁴ law for a Roman knight or even for any citizen whatever⁵ to be elected consul, but, never theless, the Romans did not favor "new men," as they called those whose fathers had not been curule magistrates

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. win : adipīscor, ī, adeptus.
2. office : honor, ōris, m., lit. honor.
3. lay down, enact : sancīō, īre, sānxī, sānctus.
4. according to : secundum, prep. with acc.
5. any whatever : quīvis, quaevis, quodvis.

Conditions at Rome at this Time (continued).

Formerly this nobility had possessed all the best virtues: bravery, steadfastness, endurance,¹ prudence, wisdom; and the Roman people gladly followed its leaders and used its counsels. But during the last fifty years before Cicero's birth,² its power had been gradually broken, so that it no longer enjoyed, as previously, the confidence of the people; and although later its prestige had again increased,³ yet the Roman equestrian order⁴ was now particularly hostile to it.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. endurance : patientia, ae, f.
2. before Cicero's birth : translate : before Cicero born; see Lesson XXIX, Example 8.
3. increase : crēscō, ere, crēvī.

17.

The Accusation of Gaius Verres.

During a hundred years only one "new man" had been able to win the consulship, the highest honor of the republic. This was Gaius Marius, another citizen of Arpinum.¹ Cicero determined to try to do the same. But before he could attain the consulship, it was necessary first to hold lower offices, the aedileship² and praetorship.³ Meanwhile he gained great reputation by accusing Gaius Verres, one of the nobles, who for three years had been praetor in Sicily, where he plundered the provincials in every way.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. citizen of Arpinum : translate by one word : Arpinās, ātis, m.
2. aedileship : aedilitās, ātis, f.
3. praetorship : praetūra, ae, f.

18.

The Career of Verres.

In Sicily no class had been exempt from Verres' avarice,¹ cruelty, or insults.² The rich he plundered of money or works of art;³ others he compelled to pay heavier taxes;⁴ he visited all with as heavy burdens⁵ as possible.⁶ In three years he desolated⁷ the island more than either the two servile⁸ wars or the long war between Rome and Carthage. So diligently⁹ did he use his opportunities¹⁰ that he boasted that he had secured enough for¹¹ a life of ease,¹² even if he should be compelled to relinquish¹³ more than half¹⁴ of his plunder.

19.

The Indictment of Verres.

As soon as Verres departed from Sicily, the Sicilians determined to call him to¹ trial, and persuaded Cicero, who had been quaestor at Lilybaeum five years before, to undertake the case. Verres was defended by Hortensius and was relying upon the assistance of all the nobility. At first his friends tried to prevent² the prosecution³ by bribes⁴ and threats; when they discovered that this could not be done, they attempted to substitute another prosecutor⁵ in place of⁶ Cicero.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. to: translate: into.
2. prevent: use tollō, ere, sustulī, sublātus, lit. do away with.
3. prosecution: āctiō, ōnis, f.

5. prosecutor: āctor, ōris, m.
6. in place of: prō, prep. with abl.

20.

The Trial of Verres.

The prosecutor whom Verres' friends tried to substitute in place of Cicero, was Quintus Caecilius Niger, who had been quaestor to¹ the defendant,² had had a controversy with him, and on that account, as was said, seemed to be the better able to convict Verres of wrongdoing. But the Sicilians rejected this Caecilius, not only as not a match for³ Hortensius, but as not devoted to their cause. By⁴ a process of law⁵ which the Romans called divinatio,⁶ the judges determined who should be chosen prosecutor.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. to : translate : of.
2. defendant : reus, ī, m.
3. a match for : translate : equal to.
4. by : per, prep. with acc.
5. process of law : āctiō, ōnis, f.
6. dīvinātiō, ōnis, f.

21.

The Trial of Verres (continued).

In this divinatio Cicero delivered a speech by which he persuaded the judges to choose him to defend the Sicilians.¹ This speech is called the "Divinatio in Quintum Caecilium." But hope did not yet abandon Verres and his friends. The judges ordered the evidence to be collected in Sicily itself and allotted² Cicero one hundred and ten days for this purpose.³ Meanwhile Verres tried again to substitute another prosecutor, who should accuse him on account of his former crimes committed in Achaia.⁴

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. to defend the Sicilians: use the Gerundive Construction with ad.
2. allot: trībuō, ere, uī, ūtus.
3. purpose: rēs.
4. Achata: Achāia, ae, f.

The Trial of Verres (continued).

But this new prosecutor never went out of Italy to make investigation.¹ Cicero, assisted by² his cousin³ Lucius, completed his labors in fifty days, and returned equipped with a mass⁴ of evidence and accompanied by a crowd of witnesses⁵ gathered from all parts of the island. Hortensius now grasped⁶ at the one remaining hope of an acquittal, which seemed a not unlikely⁷ (one). He knew that if the matter could be postponed⁸ a year, Verres would be safe, since he himself would then be⁹ consul and Metellus would be praetor.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. to make investigation: translate: for the sake of investigating (inquirō, ere, quisivī, quisitus).
2. assisted by his cousin: translate: his cousin Lucius assisting.

9. would be: use the periphrastic conjugation.

23.

The Trial of Verres (continued).

Hortensius knew that the new praetor, Metellus, would substitute corrupt judges for those whom the praetor Manius Acilius Glabrio¹ had chosen, but Cicero thwarted this plan, and in his first speech, which is called "Actio Prima," set forth the evidence which he had collected. Hortensius, who had been relying on delay,² was not prepared to answer, and, after the first day, abandoned the case. Before the evidence was all heard, Verres withdrew from Rome and was condemned in his absence.³

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. Mānius Acīlius Glabriō (-ōnis).
2. delay: dilātiō, ōnis, f.
3. in his absence: translate: (was condemned) absent.

24.

The Verrine Orations.

Of the seven Verrine¹ orations, only two, the "Divinatio in Q. Caecilium" and the "Actio Prima," were delivered, and the remaining five were written out² by Cicero after Verres was condemned, and had gone into exile at Marseilles.³ In the first oration⁴ Cicero treated of⁵ Verres' city praetorship⁶; in the remaining four, of those things which he had done in Sicily: his dispensation of justice,⁷ the tithes⁸ on grain,⁹ his thefts of statues,¹⁰ and his unjust punishments of citizens.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. Verrine: Verrīnus, a, um.
2. write out: cōnscribō, ere, scripsī, scriptus.

9. on grain : use the adj. frūmentārius, a, um.
10. statue : signum, ī, n.

25.

Verres' Dispensation of Justice.

Whenever a man had died and had left property,¹ Verres used to drag² the heir into court and to terrify him so that he either gave a bribe or allowed himself to be deprived of his inheritance.³ Before he left Rome, Verres had heard that a large fortune had been bequeathed⁴ to a certain Dio,⁵ on this condition,⁶ that he should set up⁷ certain statues in the forum. For it was a custom among the Sicilians, that men in wills bade⁸ their heirs to beautify⁹ their (native) city.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

2. drag : trahō, ere, trāxī, trāctus.

9. beautify : exōrnō, 1.

26.

Whenever an heir neglected to set up a statue as ordered (to) by the will, he was compelled to pay a fine¹ to Venus Erycina,² the goddess³ who was worshipped in a temple on Mount Eryx.⁴ Now this Dio had set up the statues according to⁵ the will. Nevertheless Verres in the name⁶ of Venus accused Dio, who by false testimony⁷ was finally condemned. But the fine which he was compelled to pay, he was ordered to pay not to Venus, but to Verres. This is merely one of many⁸ examples⁹ of Verres' dispensation of justice.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. fine: multa, ae, f.

27.

Verres' Collection of Grain Taxes.

There were in Sicily three kinds of taxes¹ on grain.² Of these the first was the tithe, — the tenth part, as the name signifies,³ of the crop,⁴ — which the farmers paid to the state. The second was the emptum, which was so called because it was grain bought from⁵ the farmers by the state. It was a tax because the law compelled the farmers to sell at a lower price⁶ than the grain was worth.⁷ The third tax was the aestimatum, which was so called because the farmers were compelled to furnish the praetor either grain for⁸ his own⁹ use, or an equal amount¹⁰ of money.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. tax: vectīgal, ālis, n.
2. on grain: see Selection 24, Suggestion 9.

8. for: ad.
9. own: ipsius.
10. amount: summa, ae, f.

28.

These taxes were heavy and unjust, as¹ they were, but Verres made (them) much heavier by the way in which they were collected.² First of all³ he established⁴ new laws, having rejected⁵ the entire law of Hiero,⁶ which had previously been in force.⁷ He issued⁸ this edict⁹: "Whatever the collector¹⁰ declares the farmer ought to pay, so much he shall be compelled to pay to the collector." Thus the wretched¹¹ farmers could be deprived (spoliō) of all their grain by¹² the wickedness of the collectors.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

29.

Verres' Thefts of Statues.

There was a certain Gaius Heius, a rich citizen of Messana,¹ with whose home Verres was greatly delighted.² This Heius had a chapel³ in which were kept⁴ four very beautiful statues, which had been wrought⁵ by the most famous Greek artists,⁶ Praxiteles,⁷ Myron, and Polycletus. These were so wonderful that all who visited Messana came to behold them; but Verres took them away and pretended⁸ that he had bought them from Heius for a small (sum), although Heius had been compelled by force to sell them.

30.

Whenever a Roman praetor withdrew from Sicily and returned to Rome, the Sicilians were wont¹ to send envoys to declare to the Senate how well and kindly² the praetor had administered³ the province. Accordingly when Verres returned to Rome, deputations⁴ were sent, and among the envoys was this Gaius Heius. Heius did not wish⁵ to say how Verres had gained possession of his statues, but when Cicero urged him to tell the truth,⁶ he revealed⁷ all.

7. reveal: patefaciō, ere, fēcī, factus.

Cicero says that Heius was a man of the highest rank in his own city; that he had come to Rome to praise Verres because he had been compelled to do this by his (fellow)-citizens; he had never had these statues for sale¹ in his house, and unless he had been forced, no one would ever have persuaded him to sell the sacred statues which his ancestors had left him (as) the ornaments² of his chapel; nevertheless he had come to praise Verres, and would not³ have spoken against him, if he had been permitted⁴ to remain silent.⁵

Suggestions on the Exercise.

32.

Finally in this speech¹ "On Statues," Cicero enumerates² the many thefts which Verres has committed in Syracuse, and he compares³ two Romans well-known⁴ to the Syracusans⁵: Marcellus,⁶ who had besieged it as an enemy and taken it; and Verres, who had been sent to administer it in peace. Marcellus had saved the lives of the Syracusans; Verres had made the Forum run⁷ with their blood. The city itself, most beautiful of all the cities of Sicily, Marcellus had spared; Verres had stripped⁸ it of all its public⁹ ornaments.¹⁰ 33.

Verres' Unjust Punishments.

In the final¹ speech, "On Punishments," Cicero tells how Verres took vengeance on those who had resisted him, and what cruelty he exercised towards them. A certain Gavius² had escaped from a prison³ in Syracuse⁴ and betaken himself to Messana, where he openly⁵ boasted that he would soon be far⁶ from Verres and his cruelties. It so happened that Verres was in Messana at that time, and when he had heard from certain friends what Gavius was boasting, at once ordered him to be publicly⁷ flogged.⁸

1. final: postrēmus, a, um.

2. Gāvius, ī.

7. publicly: palam.

8. flog: verberō, 1.

34.

While Gavius was being flogged, he exclaimed,¹ "I am a Roman citizen." Verres pretended that he did not believe this, and said that he was a runaway slave.

When the wretched man again exclaimed that he was a Roman citizen, Verres did not hesitate to set up a cross² on the shore and to crucify³ the man, in sight of Italy, (the land) where he had boasted he soon would be. Verres thus violated⁴ the name of "Roman citizen," which hitherto had always been held sacred.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

2. cross : crux, crucis, f.
3. crucify : in crucem tollō (ere, sustulī, sublātus). Here write : in eam (the cross) tollere.

35.

Results of Verres' Trial.

After his condemnation,¹ Verres withdrew into exile at² Marseilles, where he remained many years. Finally he returned to Rome, where he was living when, after the murder of Julius Caesar, the Civil War broke out. The story goes that he was put to death by Antonius, because he was unwilling to give up³ a certain statue which he had stolen⁴ many years before from the Syracusans. Cicero was elected aedile⁵ in the very year in which Verres was condemned, and a few years later won first the praetorship,⁶ then the consulship.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

SENIOR REVIEW.

I.

The Philippics of Cicero.

When Julius Caesar was slain on the Ides of March in the seven hundred and tenth year of the City, Marcus Antonius was his colleague in the consulship. He,¹ fearing² that the conspirators would kill him also (a thing which³ they are said to have intended⁴ to do), concealed⁵ himself on that day and fortified his house. But when he perceived⁶ that nothing was attempted against him, he ventured to show himself in public⁷ on the following day. Lepidus was near Rome with an army, ready to depart for Spain, which province had been assigned to him with a part of Gaul. In the night after Caesar's assassination, he occupied the Forum with his troops, and even intended to make himself master⁸ of the City; but Antonius persuaded him not to do this, and won him over to himself, by giving his daughter⁹ in marriage¹⁰ to Lepidus' son. He also made Lepidus Pontifex Maximus,¹¹ which priestly office¹² had been made vacant¹³ by Caesar's death.

The Philippics of Cicero (continued).

Antonius at first pretended to be friendly to the conspirators, sent his son to them as a hostage, and so deceived them that Brutus dined¹ with Lepidus and Cassius with Antonius. Thus he persuaded them to approve a decree which he made, by which all of Caesar's acts² were ratified. Finally at Caesar's funeral³ he so inflamed the minds of the people against the conspirators that Brutus and Cassius with difficulty defended their houses and lives,⁴ and a little afterwards departed from the City with all the other conspirators. Cicero also, who greatly disapproved⁵ the vacillation⁶ of the conspirators, left the City. On the first of June,⁷ Antonius assembled the Senate to deliberate⁸ concerning the safety of the republic; but before it met, he had visited all parts of Italy, in order to discover of what temper men were towards the conspirators.

Meanwhile the young Octavius,¹ who had been left by his uncle,² Caesar, the heir of his name and estate,³ returned from Macedonia⁴ to Italy, as soon as he heard of his uncle's death, and arrived at⁵ Naples on the eighteenth of April. Hirtius and Pansa brought him to Cicero, whose advice Octavius promised he would obey. At this time, he was eighteen years old.⁶ When he returned to Rome, he first gave⁷ shows⁸ and games in honor⁹ of Caesar's victories. Meanwhile Antonius, as he went through Italy, was using the decree, by which Caesar's acts had been ratified. He even invented,¹⁰ and added to these, many things which were not in¹¹ (them). Among other things, having been bribed¹² by money, he restored to King Deiotarus the kingdom of which Caesar had deprived him, because he had borne aid to Pompey in the Civil War. He also took the public money which Caesar had deposited¹³ in a temple at Rome, and used it for bribing Dolabella,¹⁴ who had seized the consulship, and the greater part of the army.

On the 22d of May Cicero decided to return to Rome, in order to be present, when the Senate should meet on the 1st of June. But since many friends urged him not to enter the City, he determined to go away again ¹ and to travel ² in Greece. That he might do this the more willingly, Dolabella named him (as) one of his lieutenants. Antonius also, in order to remove Brutus and Cassius from the City, commissioned ³ them to buy ⁴ grain in Asia and Sicily for the use of the Republic. Meanwhile Sextus Pompeius, son of Pompey the Great, who was in charge of a large army in Spain, sent letters to the consuls in which he proposed terms of peace and friendship. When the Senate had accepted these, he left Spain and came to Marseilles. Cicero, who had set out for Greece, was forced by contrary ⁵ winds to return to Italy. On the 17th of August he arrived at Velia, ⁶ where he had a conference with Brutus, who soon after departed for his province, Macedonia.

The Philippics of Cicero (continued).

After this conference, Cicero returned to Rome, where he arrived on the 31st of August. On the following day the Senate met, and Cicero was expressly¹ summoned by Antonius, but he excused² himself, on the ground that³ he had not yet sufficiently recovered⁴ from the labor of the journey. His absence greatly displeased⁵ Antonius, who in his speech⁶ threatened openly that he would order Cicero's house to be torn down. The reason on account of which Cicero was unwilling to be present was that Antonius desired to decree certain new honors to Caesar. Cicero was unwilling to agree to⁷ these, although he knew that it was useless⁸ to resist them. The following day also the Senate met, and Antonius was absent; but Cicero was present and delivered a speech, the first of⁹ fourteen¹⁰ which he delivered against Antony. All these are called Philippics,¹¹ because they were similar to the orations which Demosthenes delivered against Philip,¹² king of Macedonia.

The First Philippic.

In the First Philippic Cicero discussed¹ certain acts of Antonius, who pretended that the decrees which he had issued² had been found by him in the papers³ left by Caesar. Nevertheless Antonius had not observed the laws which had been enacted⁴ by Caesar. One of these forbade any one to hold a praetorian⁵ province more than a year, or a consular (province) more than two years. Although Antonius had done away with⁶ this law, he kept saying⁷ that the "acts of Caesar" must be observed, and kept bringing forth⁸ things which Caesar had entered in⁹ notebooks¹⁰ (or at least¹¹ which Antonius said he had entered in notebooks), as "Caesar's acts." "I wish that Antonius himself were present,"¹² exclaimed¹³ Cicero; "then¹⁴ he would tell us in what way he would defend the acts of Caesar." This speech is short, but it is full of dignity and boldness. Antonius, when he learned what Cicero had said, was so angry that he summoned¹⁵ the Senate and ordered Cicero to be present.

Antonius' Reply to Cicero.

When Antonius had read Cicero's first speech, he seems to have understood that it was necessary either to vanquish Cicero or to be vanquished by him. The Senate had met on the 2d of September. Then Antonius went to the country, where he wrote a speech in which to reply¹ to Cicero. The Senate then met in the Temple of Concord, but Cicero's friends, who feared the violence² of Antonius, had persuaded him not to be present. Antonius spoke with the greatest vehemence³ against Cicero, and declared that he had been the author⁴ of Caesar's assassination, hoping thus to rouse⁵ against him the soldiers, whom he had stationed near the temple, where they could hear his voice. Soon after, Cicero went to his villa⁶ near Naples, where he wrote the Second Philippic. This he did not publish⁷ immediately, but first sent it to Brutus and Cassius, whom it greatly pleased.

Cicero's Second Philippic.

Let no one¹ think that Cicero ever intended to deliver this Second Philippic. Nor is it at all certain that he wished it to be read by Antonius, or that Antonius ever saw it. There are some who believe that this speech was the cause of Antonius' anger against Cicero, and, finally, of the latter's death. Cicero, when he had heard what Antonius had said against him in the Senate, wrote in this speech those things which he himself felt,² not those things which he wished to publish. The oration is full of abuse,³ and many have accused Cicero of cowardice, because he did not dare to deliver it openly⁴ in the Senate, as it seems to be delivered. For he who reads it, finds again and again,⁵ "Patres Conscripti" and similar words, (just) as if the orator had been present in the Senate. He even asks why Antony is not present.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. no one : nē quis.

9.

The Second Philippic (continued).

Cicero first asks why it has happened that for twenty years the Republic has had no enemy who has not also been his enemy. "And you, Antonius, whom I have never injured¹ by a word, why have you attacked me with your insults? You say that Caesar was killed by my advice? I fear, O senators, that I may seem to have secured some false witness, to bestow² upon me praises which are not mine. Who has ever heard me named³ in that glorious affair? Of those who were authors of the deed, whose name has been hidden?⁴ Many, indeed,⁵ have boasted that they were there,⁶ although they were absent; so greatly have they desired to be considered participants⁷ in⁸ the deed. But no one who was present has ever tried to conceal his name. If I had been present, I should neither have wished nor have been able to conceal mine."

The Second Philippic (continued).

"I will omit the crimes of your private life. There are things which I cannot mention here; but let us review your public acts. I will lay bare a few of the most shameful¹ things you have done. When you had been elected quaestor, you betook yourself at once to Caesar, whom you knew to be the sole refuge² for³ wickedness and vice. When you had enriched⁴ yourself by his favors, you won the tribunate,⁵ in which office you furnished Caesar the excuse⁶ for attacking⁷ his country. For he declared that in you the tribunate had been violated, and so pretended that he must come to the assistance⁸ of the republic. I will say nothing against Caesar, although there is nothing on account of which it is permitted a man to attack his country. But concerning you, Antonius, it must be confessed that you were the cause of the wretched civil war which then broke out."

8. that he must come to the assistance: translate: that it must be come by him to the assistance of (succurrō, ere, currī, cursum, with dat.).

The Second Philippic (continued).

“ If praise, Antonius, cannot induce you to act rightly, cannot fear turn you away¹ from the most shameful² deeds? Remember what end has always fallen to the lot³ of tyrants! You are not afraid⁴ even of the courts; if because you are innocent, I praise you; but if because you trust your own power and believe you can overthrow them, (then) again I ask whether you understand what that man has to fear⁵ who despises the courts. If you do not stand in awe⁴ of brave men and illustrious citizens, because they are prevented from attacking you by your armed followers, still believe me (that) these very followers will not long endure you! You compare yourself to Caesar. I confess that you are like him in your desire for regal power, but in other things I cannot see that you deserve to be compared⁶ with him.”

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. turn away: āvertō, ere, vertī, versus.

12.

Antonius and Octavian.

After Cicero had written the Second Philippic, Octavian, the adopted¹ son and heir of Julius Caesar, thinking that there was reason why² he should fear Antonius, tried to assassinate him by means³ of certain slaves, but this plot was discovered. Meanwhile Antonius showed himself more (and more) hostile to the conspirators. In the Forum he erected a statue to Caesar with the inscription:⁴ "To the most worthy Defender of his country." Octavianus at the same time was trying to win over to himself the soldiers of Caesar and vying⁵ with Antonius in the promises which he made to them, so that soon he gathered a large and powerful army of veterans. But as he had no magistracy, he courted⁶ the Senate, in order that it might more readily⁷ sanction⁸ his acts.

8. sanction : cōfirmō, 1.

Octavian especially urged Cicero to return to Rome and assist him. But Cicero for a long time hesitated to come, partly because he distrusted the capacity¹ of the young man, partly because he disapproved his friendship with the murderers of his uncle, Caesar. At last, however, he returned, on this condition, that Octavian should use all his forces for defending Brutus and his accomplices. Antonius left Rome on the twenty-eighth of September, in order to hire² four legions of Caesar which were returning from Macedonia. But when these arrived at Brundisium, three of them refused³ to follow him; thereupon⁴ he ordered all their centurions to the number of three hundred to be put to death before the eyes of himself and Fulvia, his wife; then he returned to Rome with one legion, which he had induced to accompany him. Meanwhile the three other legions remained neutral.⁵

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. capacity: ingenium, ī, n.
2. hire: condūcō, ere, dūxī, ductus.
3. refused: translate: were unwilling.
4. thereupon: tum.
5. remain neutral: quiēscō, ere, ēvī, ētus.

14.

Antonius, when he had come to Rome, issued¹ many very strict edicts, and summoned the Senate for the 28th of October. Two days before it met, he heard that two out of the three legions which were at Brundisium had followed Octavian and were at Alba.² He was so much alarmed by this news that he abandoned the plan of proscribing Octavian, and having distributed several provinces among his friends, left the City, to take possession of cis-alpine Gaul,³ which had been assigned to him by a pretended law of the people, against the will of the Senate.⁴ On the departure of Antonius, Cicero returned to Rome, where he arrived on the ninth of December. He immediately conferred with Pansa,⁵ one of the consuls elect,⁶ (as to) what was best to do. Octavian, in order to show his good will⁷ toward the Republic, allowed Casca,⁸ who had stabbed⁹ the Dictator first, to become tribune of the people on the 10th of December.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. issue : prōpōnō, ere, posuī, positus, lit. post, set up.
2. Alba, ae, f.
3. cis-alpine : citerior, us, lit. hither, on this side.

8. Casca, ae, m.
9. stab : percutiō, ere, cussi, cussus.

15.

The Third Philippic.

The tribunes summoned the Senate for the nineteenth of December. Cicero had intended to be absent on that day, but, one day before, he had received the edict of Decimus Brutus, to whom Caesar a little before his death had assigned Hither Gaul as a province, and whom Antonius now ordered to withdraw. In this edict Brutus boldly declared that he would not hand the province over to Antonius, but would defend it against him by force, if it was necessary. He accordingly forbade Antonius to enter the province. When the Senate had assembled in great numbers, Cicero delivered the Third Philippic, in which he praises Octavian and tells how he (had) detached¹ two legions from Antonius. He then abuses²

Antonius, and compares him to Tarquinius Superbus,³ the last king, whose name was most hateful to the Romans. Finally he urges that the Senate send support to Decimus Brutus.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. detach: abstrahō, ere, trāxī, trāctus.
2. abuse: vituperō, 1.
3. Tarquinius Superbus, 1, m.

16.

The Fourth Philippic.

After he had delivered his speech in the Senate, Cicero then descended into the Forum, where he delivered before¹ the people the speech which is called the Fourth Philippic. In this he tells the people what had been said and done in the Senate. He again praises Octavian and the loyalty of the two legions which had followed him rather² than Antonius; he again abuses Antonius. He congratulates the Romans and bids them rejoice that they have a man such as Decimus Brutus, to protect their liberty.³ His words, which were few, seem to have stirred the people deeply,⁴ so that they shouted to him that he had on that day saved the Republic a second time. No one can say that either on this day or after this day Cicero hid his anger or was silent from fear. When we consider⁵ his age,⁶ and the dangers which he incurred,⁷ we cannot sufficiently admire the spirit⁸ which he exhibited in these last months of his life.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. before: ad.
2. rather: potius.

3. to protect their liberty : express by the Gerundive Construction.

4. stir deeply : concitō, l.

5. consider : reputō, l.

6. age : aetās, ātis, f.

7. incus : subeō, ire, ii, itus.

8. spirit : animus, i, m.

17.

Antonius and the Senate.

The consuls, Hirtius and Pansa, were very friendly to Cicero, consulted him often, and highly¹ valued his opinion. But they had also been friends of Caesar and Antonius. Accordingly they were unwilling to use severe² measures³ against the latter. As soon as they had entered upon their magistracy, they summoned the Senate, that it might determine what was best to be done for the Republic. Both spoke with great firmness,⁴ promised that they would defend the liberty of the state, and exhorted the Senate to do the same. Then they asked that a certain Fufius, who had been consul four years before and was Pansa's father-in-law,⁵ deliver⁶ his opinion first. Cicero wished to declare Antonius an enemy⁷ of the republic at once, but this Fufius, who was a friend of Antonius, proposed⁸ that before they did this, they should send envoys to him to warn him not to enter Hither Gaul.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. highly : Lesson VIII, Example 12.

2. severe : sevērus, a, um.

3. measure : ratiō, ōnis, f.

4. firmness : cōstantia, ae, f.

7. declare an enemy : the regular Latin expression is hostem iudicāre.
8. propose, move : cēnsēō, ēre, uī, cēnsus ; with ut-clause.

18.

The Fifth Philippic.

Other senators also agreed with¹ this opinion of Fufius, on the ground that² it was cruel and unjust to condemn a man, unless they should first hear whether he was able to defend his acts. Against this opinion Cicero delivered in the Senate his Fifth Philippic, in which he moved that the Senate declare Antonius an enemy and offer pardon to those soldiers who should return to their duty before the first of February ; also that it extend thanks to Brutus for³ those things which he had done in Gaul ; decree a statue to Marcus Lepidus ; and extend thanks to Octavian and make him a senator. Cicero declared that if these things should be decreed without delay, the Senate would do all things which the occasion⁴ demanded ; but that there was need of promptness ;⁵ (and) that if they had used this⁶ already, they would have had no war.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. agree with : assentior, īrī, sēnsus ; with dat.
2. on the ground that : express by quōd with the proper mood.
3. for : prō.

6. that if they had used this : translate : which if they had used

19.

The Sixth Philippic.

To Octavian the Fathers decreed not only the honors which Cicero had proposed, but even greater (ones). But they did not agree¹ concerning the sending of ambassadors² to Antonius. For three days they deliberated, and finally would have done all the things which Cicero ordered, had not³ a tribune of the people⁴ vetoed (them).⁵ The ambassadors therefore set out for Antonius, but they were charged⁶ only to order him to withdraw from Mutina,⁷ where he was besieging Brutus, and to do no injury⁸ to the province of Gaul; likewise (they were charged) to go to Brutus himself in Mutina,⁹ and extend to him and his army the thanks of the Roman people. Since the Senate deliberated so long, the people desired to know what had been done. Accordingly they asked Cicero to come forth¹⁰ from the senate-house and address them.¹¹

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. agree : cōsentiō, ire, sēnsī, sēnsū.
2. concerning the sending of ambassadors : express by Gerundive Construction.

 10. come forth : ēgredior, ī, gressus.
 11. address them : translate : make words before (ad) them.

20.

The Sixth Philippic (continued).

I think, Quirites, that you have already heard what has been done by the Senate. For the matter has been discussed¹ since the 1st of January. I know that the opinion of the Senate is disapproved by you. For to whom are we sending ambassadors? To a man, who, having committed many nefarious crimes hitherto, is now attacking a commander of the Roman people and besieging your most loyal and gallant colony. And yet it is not an embassy, but a declaration² of war, unless he obeys. For men have been sent to order³ him not to attack⁴ the consul elect, not to besiege Mutina, not to lay waste the province, not to enroll troops, but to submit⁵ himself to the Senate and Roman people. But I will now say again what I have just said in the Senate. I will predict⁶ that Antonius will do none⁷ of these things, but will besiege Mutina and enlist troops, where ever he can.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. discuss : agitō, 1.
2. declaration : dēnūntiātīō, ōnis, f.
3. order : use imperō, 1.
4. not to attack : use nē with the subjunctive.

6. predict : praēdicō, ere, dixī, dictus.
7. none : translate : nothing.

21.

The Seventh Philippic.

After the ambassadors had set out for the camp of Antonius, his friends at Rome, under the leadership of Fufius,¹ were trying to win over the rest of the citizens. They sent and received letters from Antonius and gave out² those letters of his which seemed likely to please³ the Senate and people. Cicero, however, felt that the dangers which threatened the state had not yet been warded off, and delivered in the Senate his seventh speech against Antonius. Although it was still uncertain what replies Antonius would make to the embassy which the Senate had sent to him, Cicero urged that they should not accept any conditions which Antonius might propose; (saying) that all ranks⁴ of the Roman people were in agreement;⁵ that armies and generals were ready; that nothing was to be feared, provided only they should exhibit the courage and steadfastness which became⁶ Romans.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. under the leadership of Fufius: translate: Fufius being leader.
2. give out: ēdō, ere, ēdidī, itus.
3. likely to please: express by the future active participle.

Antonius' Reply to the Ambassadors.

After the embassy left Rome, the consuls prepared for war, in case Antonius should reject the demands of the ambassadors. On February 6th the ambassadors brought back word that Antonius would obey none of the demands of the Senate, nor allow the ambassadors to go to Decimus Brutus. They even brought with them demands from¹ Antonius, of which the principal² were these that the Senate should reward his troops; that all his acts should be ratified; that no account³ of the money which Caesar had left and which he himself had taken should be rendered,⁴ and that he should be put in charge of Further Gaul with an army of six legions. Pansa summoned the Senate to hear the words of the ambassadors, when Cicero delivered a vigorous⁵ speech, in which⁶ he urged that the Senate exercise the greatest severity⁷ towards Antonius.

The Seventh Philippic.

After the ambassadors had set out for the camp of Antonius, his friends at Rome, under the leadership of Fufius,¹ were trying to win over the rest of the citizens. They sent and received letters from Antonius and gave out² those letters of his which seemed likely to please³ the Senate and people. Cicero, however, felt that the dangers which threatened the state had not yet been warded off, and delivered in the Senate his seventh speech against Antonius. Although it was still uncertain what replies Antonius would make to the embassy which the Senate had sent to him, Cicero urged that they should not accept any conditions which Antonius might propose; (saying) that all ranks⁴ of the Roman people were in agreement;⁵ that armies and generals were ready; that nothing was to be feared, provided only they should exhibit the courage and steadfastness which became⁶ Romans.

When the Senate had received the answer of Antonius and had heard the demands which the ambassadors brought, some wished to send another embassy, but Cicero prevented this from being done. On the following day, when the Senate had met again, in order to draw up in form¹ the resolution² which they had passed³ the day before,⁴ Cicero delivered his eighth speech against Antonius. "Some," said he, "say that there is a tumult,⁵ but I say there is war. Has not Hirtius called it war, (he) who has written in a letter: 'I have taken the town. Their cavalry has been put to flight. Many have been slain.' Do you call this peace?" Then he mentions other civil wars, and compares them with this, in which all men who are worthy the name of Romans, have one and the same sentiment.⁶

The Ninth Philippic.

Servius Sulpicius, one of the three ambassadors who had gone to Antonius, had died near Mutina, and on the day after Cicero delivered his Eighth Philippic, Pansa again called the Senate together, to deliberate (on) what honors they should pay¹ to his memory. The consul himself proposed a public funeral² and a statue. Others said that a statue ought to be set up³ only to those who had been slain by violence in defending the republic; but Cicero, who from youth had been a friend of Sulpicius and who admired him (as) especially versed in the law, urged the Senate in a speech which is called the Ninth Philippic, to adopt the view⁴ of Pansa. In this he said that if chance⁵ had brought death to Sulpicius, he should not have considered him worthy of a monument, but now no one could doubt that it was the embassy itself which had been the cause of his death,⁶ and the highest honors ought to be paid¹ him.

The Tenth Philippic.

A little after the Ninth Philippic had been delivered, news was brought to the consuls that Marcus Brutus had gained possession of Macedonia, from which he had driven out Gaius Antonius, brother of Marcus, and had gained many other successes.¹ As soon as Pansa received this news, he summoned the Senate to hear them. He himself praised Brutus and moved that thanks be extended to him. But Fufius, who followed him, declared that since Brutus had acted² without the authority of the Senate, he ought to give up³ his army at once. Cicero then arose and delivered another speech, which is called the Tenth Philippic, in which he praises the courage and patience of Brutus, and urges the Romans to rush together⁴ from all sides to quench⁵ the flames⁶ of civil war which Antonius has lighted,⁷ (saying) that he⁸ alone was the cause of bloodshed, and that they would have peace, if they should only crush him.

Dolabella in Asia.

While these things were being done¹ in Macedonia Dolabella,² who had been the colleague of Antonius in the consulship, arrived in Asia and killed Trebonius,³ who had been put in charge of that province by the Senate. Having been informed of these things, the consuls summoned the Senate, which at once declared that Dolabella was an enemy of the Republic and confiscated⁴ his property.⁵ Then the question was discussed,⁶ whom they should put in charge of the war against Dolabella. Some wished to send Publius Servilius,⁷ others the two consuls Hirtius and Pansa, and to assign to them the two provinces (of) Asia and Syria.⁸ Pansa himself wished this, as did also his friends and (those) of Antonius, who saw that in this way they would prevent the consuls from coming to the assistance⁹ of Decimus Brutus, who was still besieged in Mutina.

27.

The Eleventh Philippic.

Cicero, since he thought it was unjust to send another to the province where Cassius already was, strove to bring it about¹ that a resolution of the Senate should be passed² by which the command of this province should be entrusted to him, although many of Cassius' friends advised him not to oppose³ Pansa. He persevered,⁴ however, and delivered a speech, the Eleventh Philippic, in support of⁵ this opinion; (saying) that since Dolabella had been adjudged an enemy, he ought to be followed up by war; that he had a legion, runaway slaves, a wicked band of impious men: therefore a commander⁶ ought to be chosen at once against him. But meanwhile Cassius had already defeated Dolabella, who killed himself in order not to come into the hands of the victor.

28.

The Twelfth Philippic.

Decimus Brutus was so hard pressed¹ in Mutina that his friends feared that he would be captured and visited with the most dreadful² punishment, as Trebonius (had been) in Asia. Accordingly, since the friends of Antonius said that he was now ready to make peace with the Senate, many advised that a second embassy be sent to him. Even Cicero at first approved this and allowed himself to be named with Servilius and three other senators of consular rank.³ But soon he persuaded himself that Antonius was merely trying to secure delay till Ventidius should bring three other legions to him. Accordingly Cicero delivered another speech in the Senate, in which he repudiated⁴ this plan and spoke so vehemently,⁵ that it was abandoned,⁶ and Pansa soon afterwards set out to join Hirtius⁷ and Octavian against Antonius.

7. to join Hirtius : translate: to join himself with Hirtius. For join, use conjungō, ere, jūnxī, jūctus.

29.

The Thirteenth Philippic.

When Antonius had written a letter to Hirtius and Octavian, in order to persuade them that they were damaging both themselves and their reputation, in that¹ they had joined themselves with those who had slain Julius Caesar, they did not reply, but sent the letter to Cicero. At the same time Lepidus sent a public letter to the Senate, in which he urged it to make peace with Antonius. This greatly displeased the Senate. And so, while they extended thanks to Lepidus on account of his love of peace, they asked that he should leave that to them; (saying) that there could be no peace with Antonius, until he laid down his arms. Encouraged by Lepidus' letter, the friends of Antonius again urged that the Senate make a treaty with him. Cicero then delivered the Thirteenth Philippic, in which he shows how useless it would be to make peace with Antonius.

Suggestions on the Exercise.

1. in that: quod, with the subjv.

30.

The Fourteenth Philippic.

When Pansa with four new legions had set out for Hirtius' camp near Mutina, Antonius tried to attack him before he should arrive. A fierce battle ensued,¹ in which Hirtius came to the assistance of Pansa, and Antonius was defeated with great loss. When this news was brought to Rome, the people assembled in great numbers before the house of Cicero and bore him to the Capitol. On the following day, when Marcus Cornūtus, the praetor, had called the Senate together, in order that it might deliberate concerning the letters which he had received from the consuls and Octavian, Servilius advised that the citizens should lay aside the sagum,² which they had assumed³ several days before. Cicero, who was unwilling to permit this, arose and delivered the Fourteenth Philippic, in which he urged that they retain the sagum, and blamed Servilius because he had not called Antonius an enemy.

This was the last Philippic. The two consuls fell at Mutina. Then Octavian, Antonius, and Lepidus were appointed triumvirs.⁴ At their order, Cicero was proscribed,⁵ and soon after, on the 7th of December, was put to death.
